From the New York Mirror. FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF EUROPE.

NUMBER SEVENTY-SIX.—(BY N. P. WILLIS.)
The palace of Schoenbrunn—Hietzing, the summer retreat of the wealthy Viennese—country-house of the American consul—specimen of pure domestic happiness in a German family—splendid village hall—substantial fare for the ladies—curious fashion of cushioning the windows—German grief.

Drove to Schoenbrunn. It is a princely palace, some three miles from the city, occupied at present by the emperor and his court. Napoleon resided here during his visit to Vienna, and here his son died—the two circumstances which alone make it worth much trouble to see. The afternoon was too cold to hope to meet the emperor in the grounds, and being quite satisfied with drapery and modern paintings, I contented myself with having driven through the court, and kept on to Hietzing.

This is a small village of country-seats within an hour's drive of the city—another Jamaica Plain, or Dorchester, in the neighborhood of Boston. It is the summer retreat of most of the rank and fashion of Vienna. The American consul has here a charming country-house, buried in trees, where the few of our countrymen who travel to Austria find the most hospitable of welcomes. A bachelor friend of mine from New York is domiciliated in the village with a German family. I was struck with the Americanism of their manners. The husband and wife, a female relative and an intimate friend of the family, were sitting in the garden engaged in grave, quiet, sensible conversation. They had passed the afternoon together. Their manners were affectionate to each other, but serious and respectful. When I entered, they received me with kindness, and the conversation was politely changed to French, which they all spoke fluently. Topics were started, in which it was supposed I would be interested, and altogether the scene was one of the simplest and purest domestic happiness. This seems to you, I dare say, like the description of a very common thing, but I have not seen such a one before since I left my country. It is the first family I have found in two years' travel who lived in, and seemed sufficient for, themselves. It came over me with a kind of feeling of refreshment.

In the evening there was a ball at a public room in the village. It was built in the rear of a cafe, to which we paid about thirty cents for entrance. I was not prepared for the splendor with which it was got up. The hall was very large and of beautiful proportion, built like the interior of a temple, with columns on the four sides. A partition of glass divided it from a supper room equally large, in which were set out perhaps fifty tables, furnished with a carte, from which each person ordered his supper when he wished it, after the fashion of a restaurant. The best band in Vienna filled the orchestra led by the celebrated Strauss, who has been honored for his skill with presents from half the monarchs of Europe.

The ladies entered, dressed in perfect taste, a la Parisienne, but the gentlemen (hear it, Basil Hall and Mrs. Trollope!) came in frunk coats and boots, and danced with their hats on! It was a public ball, and there was, of course, a great mixture of society; but I was assured that it was attended constantly by the most respectable people of the village, and was as respectable as anything of the kind in the middle classes. There were, certainly, many ladies in the company of elegant manners and appearance, and among the gentlemen I recognized two attaches to the French embassy, whom I had known in Paris, several Austrian gentlemen of rank were pointed out to me among the dancers. The gallopade and the waltz were the only dances, and dirty boots and hats to the contrary notwithstanding, it was the best waltzing I ever saw. They danced with a soul.

The best part of it was the supper. They danced and eat—danced and eat, the evening through. It was quite the most important entertainment of the two. The most delicate ladies present returned three and four times to the supper, ordering fried chicken, salads, cold meats and beer, again and again, as if every waltz created a fresh appetite. The bill was called for, the ladies assisted in making the change, the tankard was drained, and off they strolled to the ball-room to engage with renewed spirit in the dance. And these, positively, were ladies who in dress, manners, and modest demeanor, might pass uncriticized in any society in the world! Their husbands and brothers attended them, and no freedom was attempted, and I am sure it would not have been permitted even to speak to a lady without a formal introduction.

We left most of the company supping at a late hour, and I drove into the city, amused with the ball, and reconciled to any or all of the manners which travellers in America find so peculiarly entertaining.

These cold winds from the Danube have given me a rheumatism. I was almost reconciled to it this morning, however, by a curtain scene which I should have missed but for my annoyance. I had been driven out of my bed at daylight, and was walking my room between the door and the window, when a violent knocking in the street below arrested my attention. A respectable family occupies the house opposite, consisting of a father and mother and three daughters, the eldest attractive of whom has a lover. I cannot well avoid observing them whenever I am in my room, for every house in Vienna has a leaning cushion on the window for the elbows, and the ladies of all classes are upon them the greater part of the day. A handsome carriage, servants in livery, and other circumstances leave no doubt in my mind that my neighbors are rather of the better class.

The man stood at the street door with a cloak on his arm, and a man at his side with his portmanteau. He was going on a journey and had come to take leave of his mistress. He was let in by a gaping servant, who looked rather astonished at the hour he had chosen for his visit, but the drawing-room windows were soon thrown open, and the lady made her appearance with her hair in papers and other marks of a hasty toilette. My room is upon the same floor, and as I paced to and fro, the narrowness of the street in a manner forced them upon my observation. The scene was a very violent one, and the lady's tears flowed without restraint. After twenty partings at least, the lover scarce getting to the door before he returned to take another embrace, he finally made his exit, and the lady threw herself on a sofa and hid her face—for five minutes! I had begun to feel for her, although her swollen eyes added very unnecessarily to her usual plainness, when she rose and rang the bell. The servant appeared and disappeared, and in a few minutes returned with a ham, a loaf of bread, and a mug of beer! and down sat my sentimental miss and consoles the agony of parting with a meal that I would venture to substitute in quantity for any working man's lunch.

I went to bed and rose at nine, and she was sitting at breakfast with the rest of the family, playing as good a knife and fork as her sisters, though, I must admit, with an expression of sincere melancholy in her countenance.

The scene, I am told by my friend the consul, was perfectly German. They eat a great deal, he says, in affliction. The poet writes:

"They are the silent griefs which cut the heart strings."

For silent read hungry.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 14, 1834.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.
NO. XXXIII.

Washington, Jan. 8th, 1834, 12 o'clock, P. M. Expressly.—To-day has been a political Sabbath, on which I hold it sacrilege to labor. Yet the pettifoggers of the "money changers" have not forborne to utter their imprecations against Him, whose name is indissolubly associated with the day; nor refrained from offering their impious supplications for the restoration of the Deposites! I trust in Heaven, the Millennium will come long before the "restoration!"

The nineteenth Anniversary of the Battle of New Orleans has been a delightful day, and worthy of the occasion. The sun rose in splendor and set in majesty; and yet Mr. Southard groaned all day in the Senate, to the tune of Old Hundred, and Mr. Binney canted all day in the House about constitutional "harmony!" I had rather hear one psalm in the "Old Colony Harmony," than both of their duetta till doomsday! To do Samuel Southard justice, his speech was the very best that has yet been eructated by the opposition; and, to do Horace Binney justice, his metaphysics would starve to death any chameleon in Guiana or the Barbary powers I mistake, if a dying speech of his would not kill the largest audience, before he was even struck with death himself. I left him to hear Southard, and left Southard to hear the reverberated echoes of the Rotunda.

Even the sun has spots upon its disk, and why should we marvel that the Eighth of January should have two small grease spots? Never mind!—a little Clay will take them all out. It is but an emblem of the opposition;—they are only about in spots!

The day was commemorated by a public dinner, of which a large party partook—Mr. Van Buren, and other distinguished citizens, being invited guests; the evening, by a splendid party at Gov. Woodbury's, the Secretary of the Navy. The President had a select dinner party at the Executive mansion. I regretted I could not be—I won't say omnipresent, that's profane—trio-present, nor even duopresent; and therefore consoled myself with being simply present at the Secretary's; and it required a precious little consolation to console myself for being absent any where but there. Shall I tell you where it is?—In the President's Square, the mansion occupied by the Secretary of the Navy, time immemorially—i. e. since the time Tom Moore of "lascivious" memory wrote about Washington; nevertheless, Tom spoke the truth to a T; but that is neither here nor there. All the cabs and coaches in the city were put in requisition. About 8 o'clock my coach (No. 69—a number not to be forgotten while Napoleon is remembered) fell into the ranks, and I landed upon the coach-stone fifteen minutes after precisely.

As I passed the Executive mansion the beacon lights flashed out brilliantly from the windows and portico; and while I was waiting in the anti-chamber of the street, I had ample leisure to muse upon the battle of New Orleans, and reflect upon the incidents of its nineteenth anniversary: "Among them"—I wish I could say "not of them"—I could not but reflect, that while he, who had won the most extraordinary victory recorded in history, and should have been called upon, and congratulated, and honored, by the whole Representative delegation of the nation, was impugned and porcupined, pasquaded in both Houses of Congress, by two pettifoggers, pulling about deposits! They could not have done him more honor.

Pennsylvania was the first State to nominate him for the Presidency, and New Jersey was not the last to support him; and yet the Representative of the one, and the Senator of the other, have disgraced their States, and desecrated the day, and mortalized themselves, by groaning and ideology.

I mounted the long flight of door-steps with light heels and a light heart, and passing through a crowded hall (where entry?) and leaving my beaver, was ushered into the Saloon, where I was so fortunate as to be recognized, both in person and name, (which is not always the case, from our introduction, after hundreds on the same day) by my host, who introduced me to his accomplished lady.

What a dense mass of joy, and festivity, and fashion, and beauty, the scene exhibited! The ceiling sent down but one single sound:

"But in that sound were many voices!"

At one extremity of the Saloon, in Roman capitals—and worthy of him!—was inscribed, in roses and evergreens, "THE HERO;" at the other, "NEW ORLEANS."

A band of music was playing, and I soon found myself in motion.

"All was in motion; rings, and plumes, and pearls were shining everywhere."

But every body and every thing had to move at slow time, except the thousand tongues! The living whirlpool carried me into an eddy, where I was told they were dancing cotillions; and, egad! I was half inclined to believe it; for I saw their heads bobbing up occasionally, and was politely requested, periodically, to put my hands behind me, and let the ladies pass; and moreover, I saw a magic—not circle but—square of five feet, six inches and two barley-corns, laid out, located and registered as quadrille ground; and furthermore, I saw Judge Wilkins and Miss Woodbury (according to my best knowledge and belief) "hurrying to and fro" "on light fantastic toe," moving to the cadence of the music. Think of the venerable Senator, and (something less than) "blossoming seventeen," keeping time in the mazes of the dance! The spirits of both were alike youthful; but in years they were the emblem of the Almatree; he was

Wan as the blossom that fell yesterday;

while she was like

"To-day's young flower that's springing in its stead."

I never witnessed a scene that charmed me more. I shall leave you in the midst of the dance, and give you the sequel at another Glimpse.

REIS EFFENDI.

The Faneuil Hall Meeting.—In the resolutions of Mr. Biddle, registered by this meeting, the prototype of a Paris Parliament, one cause of the money pressure was omitted to be noticed, viz. the cash duties and short credits on the import duties. It has required two millions of dollars of the importers at this port alone, this year, to meet this change. But as this policy was adopted to benefit the monied capitalists, whether manufacturer, importer or money lender, and is an important part of that general plan to foster and build up a great and controlling money power in this country, Mr. Biddle's meeting designedly avoided any allusion to it.

Samuel Greele, Esq., was yesterday elected Alderman, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of the Hon. James Savage. We understand that there was some variation in the orthography of his name on different votes, but the Committee took it for granted that they were all intended for him.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

Monday, Jan. 13.—In the Senate, an order from the House instructing the committee on Banks to consider and report on the expediency of instructing the Delegation in Congress to endeavor to procure the charter of a U. S. Bank, on the plan submitted by Mr. White, was read, and non-concurred, and said order committed to Messrs. Barton and Williams of a Joint Committee, to which the House concurred, and joined Messrs. White, Boat and Ruggles.

The Resolve concerning the Warren Bridge, was read again and passed in concurrence.

In the House, the only business of importance was the appointment of a committee of one from each County, to consider the expediency of revising and altering the law relating to licenses.

More Fruits.—Yesterday a gentleman who had received from a soldier of the revolution, a power of attorney to draw his pension, called at the Bank of the United States to draw the money for the old hero. He was told that orders had been received to close the account in that Bank, as all future payments would be made at the Girard Bank. The gentleman then proceeded to the Girard Bank, and made application for the pension money. He then learned that no orders had been given to that Bank to pay pensions, and they had no books, papers, or any kind of authority, for transacting their business, and thus the papers, &c. must be returned to the old pensioner, more than two hundred miles, and he must wait until Congress can regulate matters that are now so deranged.

The above is from the United States Philadelphia Gazette. We venture to predict, that when the truth comes to light, it will be seen that the fault is in the Bank of the United States. We have been informed that the Branch Bank in this city, has refused to pay over the pension funds, and deliver up the books and papers, as ordered by the War Department, to the newly appointed agent. We also understand that they will not even pay the pensioners—it would hence seem, that the Bank and its Branches are to make an united effort to nullify the government of the people.

The Albany Argus of the 8th inst. contains the Message of Gov. Marcy, transmitted to the Legislature on the preceding day. It is such a document as we should expect from him—sound, comprehensive, and practical in its views. It contains much valuable information in regard to the internal affairs of that great State, and displays an intimate knowledge of its wants and resources.

In speaking of the attitude of South Carolina at the commencement of the last year, Gov. M. pays the National Administration a neat and deserved compliment, by expressing his gratification that "our national affairs were in the hands of those who were peculiarly fitted for such a crisis, and who were enabled by their wisdom, firmness, and moderation, to conduct this unhappy controversy to a peaceful issue, without conceding any right belonging to the general government, or giving any countenance to the novel and dangerous doctrine of nullification."

The affairs of the State are in a prosperous condition, and the statistical facts relative to the state of public education and moral improvement, highly satisfactory. The improvement by means of Canals, &c., is handled with great ability, and the soundness of the views expressed, must commend them to the eager and favorable notice of the citizens of that State.

From St. Ubes.—The brig Leander, at Salem, brings accounts to the 27th of Nov. The Miguelites were garrisoned at Alcazar de Sal, an inland post, about eighteen miles from St. Ubes, which they took possession of on the 3d. The Pedroites retained possession of St. Ubes, and all the principal seaports, together with the fleet. The Miguelites had made several attempts to take St. Ubes, and skirmishes were frequent. It was the general opinion that hostilities would cease with the present campaign.

The Atlas hops about like parched corn—it has overheard something that was said in City Hall, and has swelled up like a frog full of froth in consequence. Don't make yourself unhappy, Dicky—be a good boy and keep your nose clean, and you will do well enough.

The Tabernacle Church and Society in Salem, have given an unanimous invitation to Mr. Samuel Horatio Stearns, of Bedford, Mass. to become their Pastor, in room of Rev. Mr. Cleveland, who is about removing to Detroit. Mr. Stearns has received a similar invitation from the Old South Church in this city.

Salem seems to be infested with a gang of thieves, who are more than usually industrious. The Register of Monday contains a list of seven stores and shops which were broken open in two nights.

The General Assembly of Rhode Island will convene in Providence to-day. The principal subjects pending before the Assembly are the questions relating to the extension of suffrage, State Prison, and the Masonic Charters.

Fashionable.—White neckcloths will now be revived—and they ought to be—hog's bristles and black bombazine, have borne sway long enough. Gentlemen with black about their necks have been refused admission to King William's parties.

"Where could I get this nose?" inquired a rake, when treating upon his family likeness. "At the wine-cellar, I presume," retorted a friend, who discovered its propensity to blush.

The Six Degrees of Crime: Wine, Women, Gambling, Theft, Murder and the Scaffold—a Melo Drama, in six parts, translated from the French, by F. S. Hill.

We have cast a hasty glance at the MS. of this drama, the title of which, for a miracle, is an accurate index of its character. In the 1st degree—Wine—a young heir takes his initiatory degree to the Road to Ruin, with some young bleeders, who congratulate him "for a happy dog to be left with such a splendid fortune," and in having "such excellent friends to shew him how to spend it;" and moisten their "philosophy with wine to make it flow glibly."—In the 2d—Women—the hero abducts and domesticates the betrothed of one of his proteges.—In the 3d—Gambling—the mysteries of a French hell are revealed, and the artifices and encouragements of flash sharpers to induce a losing novice to tempt a desperate fortune, are developed with great truth and spirit, though entirely free from that vulgarity of manners, which have marked similar transactions among us, as detailed in the papers of the day. The contrivances of the "bankers" to conceal their orgies from the domiciliary visits of the police, might furnish some "new ideas" to our own officers; and the effects of gambling in blasting every vestige of honor and humanity are manifested by the hero's treatment of his mistress, when fortune frowns.—In the 4th—Theft—there is a specimen of scientific burglary and highway robbery, executed with the most perfect coolness and amusing gentility.—In the 5th—Murder—is a tragic scene of deep, thrilling, absorbing interest—horrible but not unnatural.—In the 6th—the Scaffold—death seals the delinquent's doom, without awakening one sentiment of sympathy or regret.

The style of the piece is eminently French; each character is in perfect keeping—none stands out in bold relief, to the disadvantage of the rest;—it is replete with courtly, light and amusing dialogues, and singular and striking incidents, in which the tragic and humorous are alternately exhibited with the greatest possible regard to effect. We doubt not it will prove a rich acquisition to the Warren, for which it was translated by Mr. Hill, who has executed the task in an exceedingly happy manner; and it will be performed, for the first time, to-morrow night, with a most effective cast, for his benefit.

"Pin money."—Allen & Ticknor.—Our fair friends who have perused the many delightful works which Mrs. Gore has sent forth for their amusement and edification, will need no stimulants to their curiosity in searching for what she has said upon a subject so original for a Novel, and so interesting to themselves, as "Pin Money." The name of its authoress is a sure passport to public favor for all her productions. In the present volumes, she has displayed the same easy and flowing, yet spirited style, which has characterized her preceding works, and fully sustained her reputation for shrewd observation, and an intimate knowledge of high life, which enables her to serve up its follies and peccadilloes with an originality and interest seldom surpassed. We highly recommend "Pin Money," as a work which will be read not only with amusement, but with profit, by those who are inclined to rush headlong into the current of fashionable dissipation.

Why is beauty worse than liquor?—Because it intoxicates both the holder and the beholder.

A secret jest.—On visiting the Opera a few evenings since, a friend who loves a joke himself too well not to laugh at another's, asked the Box keeper for a "New Year's," when the gentleman of the key and play bill replied, "Sir I have no change, but here's a small bill," and forthwith supplied him with one containing the night's Opera. After listening most attentively to the dulcet strains of Bordogni, he emphatically exclaimed, "well, well, that is all very beautiful, but there were much sweeter strains here when this was a sugar house."—N. Y. Traveller.

N's latest.—J. N. does not commit puns very often, but those he does make are good. A short time ago something was wrong with one of his grates, and he sent for an artist skilful in such matters, to put it to rights. The man promised to come, but came not; whereupon N. observed to a friend, as well as the chattering of his teeth would permit, "that fellow calls himself a grate setter, but I think he's a great liar, myself."—Ibid.

"Be sure you're the other side of the river at my house to-night," said honest Patrick's Landlord, who kept a close eye on his rents. "I am thinking I sha'n't go though," says Patrick to himself. In the evening Patrick's Landlord, standing on the opposite bank, bawled with might and main, "Didn't I tell you to be on the other side of the river to-night?" "Yes, your honor; and I am thinking as how your honor is one side of the river and I'm 'tither."—Hartford Review.

CONGRESS.

Thursday, Jan. 9.—In the Senate, Mr. Poin-dexter presented a resolution, which was adopted, requesting the President to cause to be laid before the Senate a schedule of the several articles received by the Ministers Consuls, or other Agents of the government of the United States at Foreign Courts, as presents from the Governments at which they were respectfully accredited, and by them deposited in the Department of State.

In the House, bills authorizing the purchase of live oak frames for a frigate and sloop of war, and for other purposes, and authorizing the President of the U. States to direct transfers of appropriations in the naval service under certain circumstances, were read twice and committed.

The House resumed the consideration of the motion to transfer the Secretary of the Treasury's Report on the Deposites to the Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Binney resumed the floor, and brought to a close the speech commenced by him on Tuesday.

When Mr. Binney concluded, Mr. Cambreleng, after a few prefatory remarks, moved the Previous Question, which the House refused (108 to 89) to order. The subject, therefore continues to be the Order of the Day. Mr. Cambreleng has the floor, but waived his right to proceed, in order to let the partial General Appropriation Bills be considered.

Friday, Jan. 10.—In the Senate, Mr. Frelinghuysen submitted a resolution that the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to inform the Senate of the construction which has been given by that Department, to the act passed at the last session of Congress entitled "An act to modify the act of the 14th of July, 1832, and all other acts imposing duties on imports," and also to furnish copies of such instructions as may have been given to collectors, regulating their duty under the said act. After some debate, in which Messrs. Clay, Webster, Forsyth and Frelinghuysen took part, the resolution was adopted.

Mr. Southard resumed and concluded his speech upon the removal of the deposits, when Mr. Calhoun rose, and after expressing a wish to be heard, moved that the Senate adjourn, but, at the suggestion of Mr. Poin-dexter, he withdrew it, for the present, and on Mr. P's motion, the Senate went into the consideration of executive business. The Senate adjourned over to Monday.

In the House, the order of the day was stated to be Mr. Selden's motion, as amended, in regard to the purchase or redemption of the five per cent. stock of the United States, which, after considerable debate, and an unsuccessful motion to lay it on the table, was agreed to, 126 to 81.

After some other unimportant business, the House adjourned over to Monday.

Foreign Items and Miscellany.

The Curate Merino, who is attracting so much observation as the leader of the Carlist Insurgents in the north of Spain, is described as 53 years of age. He has been successively a novice, preacher, shepherd, and then curate and shepherd again. He distinguished himself as a guerilla partisan against Napoleon, and afterwards, in 1820, obtained from taking part against the constitution, until suspected of illicit movements hostile to the Cortes, when he became one of their most obstinate enemies. Merino makes no prisoners—but after having mutilated them, either strangles, burns, or shoots them! His troops are, by his wish, without uniform, and he is the most ragged He takes part in every action, and never has been wounded. At night he retires alone from the encampment, and secretes himself in the woods and mountains, re-appearing on the succeeding morning. He has been appointed successively, by Ferdinand, Governor of Burgos, and canon of the Cathedral of Valencia, but such is his beastliness and immorality, that he was obliged to withdraw from those offices, retaining, however, the salaries. A pretty wise arrangement this, for a barbarian pirate! He always has a spare horse galloping alongside of him, and thus readily escapes pursuers.

The Carlschue Almanack for 1834, is this year smaller than ever—yet portraits of Gen. Jackson, Otho of Greece, and a number of fancy subjects, are crammed into this literary curiosity, which is about the size of a tolerable thumb-nail!

Warning to Usurers.—A harpy has been handed over to the police at Paris for shaving the working classes, at the rate of one franc a month on five! This is worse than the pressure on our market.

The workies at Paris abjure and repudiate agrarianism tanto meglio. Some of the journeymen tailors have been arrested. The bakers are uncommonly refractory.

The young Duke of Bordeaux, the Carlist journals say, has the beauty of Louis XIV. Some of them also aver that he resembles Napoleon and the late Duke of Reichstadt.

Stage Accident.—The Cambridge Hourly was upset, Saturday evening, between the Port and the Colleges, owing to an alarm among the passengers from the transient-pin coming out; but of a large number within and without the carriage, only two were much injured,—an Irish girl having her shoulder sprained, and a gentleman a few of his teeth knocked out.—*Mer.
